

Did you Know?

- The majority of undergraduate courses are taught by non-senate faculty.
- Most non-senate faculty are employed only through one year contracts.

Will UC students pay more but get less?

Non-tenure Lecturers are always the first to be cut, and with them students lose courses and the ability to graduate on time.

Student fees have gone up 69% since 2003, and the Regents are planning on increasing them yet again. While student fees go up, access to courses goes down. Why should you pay more for less when the University has over 5 billion dollars in unrestricted funds?

Support Higher Education: Send a message to UC and demand they fully support your courses and the lecturers who teach them:

PRESIDENT: MARK YUDOF - \_President@ucop.edu

STUDENT REGENTS (Your Representatives)

Regent D'Artagnan Scorza - dscorza@conet.ucla.edu

Regent-Designate Jesse Bernal - jbernal@education.ucsb.edu

SEND A MESSAGE TODAY!!!

Will budget cuts mean less opportunity for undergraduate education at UC?

"Your first obligation as a public university is to treat the undergraduates right."

UC President Mark Yudof
(NYT 2009)

Is the current UC plan living up to Mark Yudof's comments?

- Is it fair that your fees go up, but your education opportunities are reduced?
- Will you be able to take the courses you need for graduation?

